Matthew Kelley, the well-known horse undertaker in Frye Village, made a curious find in his burying ground one day recently. While digging a hole, he found two stones in an upright position with another across their tops and beneath was a bunch of keys. They had the appearance of being a set of burglar's keys. They were of curious shapes, having different appliances for picking locks and for turning keys in locks and showed quite remarkable ingenuity in their make-up. Whoever hid them chose a pretty good place, when they selected a horse burying ground. The keys were rusty and looked as if they had been in the ground some time.

Reading for Country Homes.

Calling at a delightful home in an Illinois city, occupied by a family of wealth and literary tastes, the writer was interested to find two or three magazines and reviews, each in neat, home-made heavy paper covers and with a list of other magazines and papers, and also a list of names of ladies forming the club which subscribed for the collection. The lady of the house spoke of the arrangement as working very nicely. The saving of expense, although not so important to her as to many, was named as one advantage. The stimulus to more extensive and careful reading, the help which comes from having a number of intelligent people reading the same things and they having subjects of interest to all to talk about when they meet, are other obvious advantages. This is not given as a new or especially rare thing. But the incident suggested the thought that this plan of co-operation in securing reading matter is not nearly so common as would be desirable. If a lady of wealth thought it helpful, certainly the plan is worth consideration by the many families in villages and on farms where money is not plentiful, yet where there is, or ought to be, a desire for good reading. There would be more inconvenience in exchanging papers or magazines in the country than in cities or villages, but they could be passed from one neighbor to another at intervals of a week, for instance, without much trouble. If a half-dozen or eight or ten families made up a club, the payment by each of the price of one good magazine or high-class literary paper would secure to all a good supply of reading for all the year. One would not care to get "news" in this way, but magazines and educational, scientific reviews or the best of the literary or religious weeklies have nearly equal value whether read when they are fresh from the press or a week or a month later. Something of the same work may be done in the matter of book buying. Lending books is typically annoying work. But if there is a regular system, where each person is equally a borrower and a lender, more care will be taken to keep the books in good condition and to return them at the time agreed upon. Books of many kinds, as well as many papers and magazines, are cheaper than ever before. Good ones should be more widely read than ever before. —Mass. Ploughman.

Try Hot Water.

"During dangerous weather of this sort" said the old doctor, "the most careful persons are likely to catch a cold in their chests that will extend quickly to the lungs if not attended to. It usually makes its presence known by a constricted sensation just under the breast bone, where the flesh is thinnest. When a person experiences this feeling he can rest assured he can procure almost instant relief by drinking a cup of water as hot as he can bear to take in the mouth and to swallow. There is no better medicine in the world to arrest the progress of a cold than hot water, and, besides its effect upon the stomach and the system generally, is beneficial in the highest degree. And in sore throat the same remedy will be found almost a specific." —Cape Ann Advertiser.

No Accidents by Derailed Trains.

The Boston and Maine does not propose to have any more accidents caused by derailed trains spreading the rails and throwing bridges down by bumping over the ties if it knows itself. A new device has been placed on all of the tracks, two ties toward the bridges from all flat or point switches. It consists of iron braces clamped to each rail and joined together by a screw eye coming in the middle. The screw eye is kept from turning over and working loose by a spike so driven in that it cannot turn over under any circumstance without taking up the whole business, ties and all. When the device was tested, two locomotives were derailed purposely to see if they could not be made to break the grip of the screw eye, but failed to start it. —Salem Observer.

Goose for the Colonel.

As a regiment was on a march to Gettysburg, some of the soldiers stepped out of the ranks and "confiscated" a couple of geese, and one of the drummers unheeded his instrument and put the captured birds in the drum. Shortly afterwards the colonel came along, and, noticing the boy shirked his usual drum whacks, rode up to him and said: "Why don't you beat that drum?" "Colonel," said the startled musician, "I want to speak to you." The colonel, drew still closer to him, and, bending his head, said: "Well! what have you to say?" The drummer whispered: "Colonel, I've got a couple of geese in here." The colonel straightened up and gravely said: "Well, if you're sick and can't play, you needn't" and then rode on. The colonel had roosted geese that night. —Argonaut.

Collarless Dogs.

There are numerous collarless dogs roaming about town, and as the courts have decided it to be no crime to steal a dog without a collar, we advise owners of dogs who value them, to protect them with a collar, for dogs like their masters have their friends and their enemies, and while the not over scrupulous friend of the canine might claim him from a friendship point of view his enemy might take him for the purpose of erecting a monument to his memory. —Franklin Advertiser.

What Culture Is.

There is a mistaken idea that "culture" means to paint a little, to sing a little, to dance a little and to quote passages from late popular books. As a matter of fact culture means mastery over self—politeness, charity, fairness, good temper, good conduct. Culture is not a thing to make a display of; it is something to use so modestly that people do not discover all at once that you have it. —Boston Sunday Journal.

Funny Bits.

"I wonder how he married her?" "As a bargain, I suppose, on account of her age." "Her age?" "Yes; it is 28, marked down from 37." —Ex.

"What has your Representative done since he's been in Congress?" "What has he done?" "Yes." "Built two houses, paid off a mortgage and opened a grocery store!" —Atlanta Constitution.

"Up to date—'How many characters are there in your play?' asked the manager. 'Characters?' said the astonished dramatist. 'Didn't I tell you this is an up-to-date drama? Not a single person in the piece has even a shred of character.'"

To the bicyclist, making his way to town on foot, after an accident to his wheel, what can be more humiliating than the crown of humiliation that to have the small boys cry out to him, "It's a good thing; push it along!" —Boston Transcript.

"Won't you be glad," she murmured, "when spring comes; when the trees begin to bud, and when the violets dot the whole ground everywhere you step?" "No, no," the young man replied, "I can't say that I will. You see, I'm just starting out in business as a florist."

CURIOUS RUSSIAN OBSERVANCES.

Easter is the Muscovite Cleaning Day. Making the Holy Christ Oil.

Easter is the greatest national religious festival of Russia. Holy week abhors in a constant season of prayer and solemnity. The clubs are closed and street musicians forbidden to play their trade. Easter is the time for giving presents, just as Christmas is with us, and every one puts on a new suit of clothes on Easter morning. The shopkeepers' fever only rages during the latter half of the week, for on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of Holy week all commerce is suspended.

Another great feature of Russian Easter is the housecleaning. The floors of the principal apartments are turned into what a stranger might suppose was a skating rink, but is actually the effect produced by two or three men skimming over the boards with brushes fastened to the soles of their feet and sometimes accompanying the motion with song. At Easter time in Russia cleanliness, instead of being the next thing to, actually is, godliness, and in observance of this maxim there ensues one great universal Muscovite wash. The public baths are crowded, and he who neglects to bathe "early and often" is regarded as a pariah.

A celebration which takes place about once in three years is the making of the holy chrism, a ceremony performed invariably either at Moscow or Kiev. The chrism oil is used for baptismal purposes, for the consecration of the metropolitan and the coronation of the czar. The making of the myro, as the oil is called, begins on the Monday morning of Passion week. The metropolitan attends at the sacristy of the patriarchs in Moscow, lights a fire, pours in a gallon and reads the gospel, and after this the oil is kept boiling for three days and nights, while monks stand over and stir it with silver ladles.

The final ceremony takes place when the oil is put into two silver caldrons upon a porcelain stove and stirred with silver ladles by six deacons in vestments of black and silver. In the center of the room is a large silver vase, the gift of Empress Catherine II, and into this the chrism is poured to receive the benediction. At the side are placed a number of smaller silver vases in which the oil is eventually sent away. People attend in crowds to dip bits of cotton wool in the holy mixture. On Holy Thursday there is a procession from the sacristy to the Cathedral of the Assumption with the oil vases, and mass is said by the metropolitan. In the intervening years, when there is no making of the myro, that ceremony is replaced by the washing of the feet of the poor.

Employment of Minors.

For the information of those who have children under fourteen whom they wish to put to work, we print the following latest revision of the state school law. We fail to see why the law does not say in as few words that every child shall attend school until 14 years of age. There would be no mistaking such a statement.

Every person having under his control a child between the ages of eight and fourteen years, and in every city and town where opportunity is furnished, in connection with the regular work of the public schools, for gratuitous instruction in the use of tools or in manual training, or for industrial education in any form, shall, upon the complaint of the school committee, or any truancy officer, forfeit to the use of the public schools of such city or town a sum not exceeding twenty dollars, but if such child has attended for a like period of time a private day school approved by the school committee of such city or town, or if such child has been otherwise instructed for a like period of time in the branches of learning required by law to be taught in the public schools, or if his physical or mental condition is such as to render such attendance inexpedient or impracticable, such penalties shall not be incurred.

Editorial Clusters.

A pleasant little episode has leaked out, connected with a recent business trip of two of our prominent and most respected citizens to a neighboring town. Finding themselves on an unfrequented road in a part of the town with which they were entirely unfamiliar, they inquired their way of those whom they met, at last hauling up before the barn of an intelligent farmer, who eyed their mud-spattered condition narrowly. After they had learned "the nearest way to Andover" from him, one of the gentlemen attempted to apologize for their appearance and their being "lost" by saying, "We are not quite full." "No," said the old farmer with a significant emphasis, "not quite!"

The Centre fire engineers insist that there is another chapter to the account of the parade of the Ballardvale department last Thursday night. Apparently the member of the board from Ballardvale is not just satisfied with his company, and thought they'd better be covered by darkness in their drilling, so he pressed the button that stirred our Ward 2. Now the members of the company want to know what can be expected of soldiers (or in this case firemen), when the leader orders a charge and then deserts.

It seems the case then, now appears to be a grind on N. E. Mears.

And speaking of "grinds," a good bit of satisfaction was enjoyed on April first by a number of our well-known young men, at the expense of an equally well known police officer. The police officer is particularly bright in playing jokes and in fathoming them, but this time, after a short walk and some "grinds," he is willing to acknowledge that the laugh is on him.

HONORS TO DR. BANCROFT.

Portrait Presented to the Trustees of Phillips Academy by New York Alumni Association. Enthusiastic Meeting in This City.

The New York Association of the alumni and students of Phillips Andover Academy held its third biennial dinner at the Brunswick Tuesday evening. It was a very successful and enthusiastic gathering of past and present students, all anxious to show their continued loyalty to this great educational institution.

Dr. Bancroft, Treasurer Hardy, and a number of the students went from here to attend and all report a most pleasant time. Perhaps the main event of the occasion was the presentation to the Trustees of the Academy of a portrait of Dr. Bancroft, who for 22 years has been the esteemed and successful head of the institution. The picture, which is said to be an excellent likeness, was painted by Loomis and was the gift of a number of members of the association.

President Melville C. Day presided at the dinner and the picture was hung behind his chair, being covered with a white cloth during the preliminary speeches. The first speaker was Leander T. Chamberlain, whose subject was "The Foundation and Topstone." Principal Bancroft was then called upon to respond to the toast "Phillips Andover." He spoke at some length in his peculiarly interesting and convincing manner on the needs and opportunities of the Academy.

"Within the last few years," he said, "we have been very much put about for room. We had recently to go into debt in order to complete our new scientific building. Then we found ourselves short of accommodations for guests. We took hold and converted the old Stowe house into a hostelry in our vicinity and under our control. It had become absolutely necessary for use when parents of students came to put them in the Academy or to visit them. But still we need more room. The dormitory system should be extended until the last of the old wooden structures is swept away—unless we keep it as a memorial."

A member of the faculty said to me the other day that he thought the Academy had reached a crisis. I agreed with him. I have been thinking it was at a crisis for the last years. I like to have it so. It puts us constantly on our mettle. Think of an institution of learning in comfortable circumstances! What a miserable condition that would be. I hope Andover will never be in comfortable circumstances. I am inclined to think, though, that this is the biggest crisis in the whole 22 years. At times I am almost depressed at the enormous amount of work to be done with the inadequate resources at our command.

We need so many things that it is hard to say which is most important, but we had a meeting of the trustees the other day, and we agreed that the one thing we need most of all is a new gymnasium. We do not want to send the boys to college without the proper physical training. We are all right in athletics. At Yale the year the captains of the three most important athletic teams are Andover boys.

But we want physical culture for the boys who are not athletes, the boys who can't play football or base-ball. There is nothing that tones up a boy's morals as to have before him the opportunities for great physical standards.

When Dr. Bancroft concluded, the wrappings were taken from his portrait and at once all burst into cheers for the venerable educator. Gilman H. Tucker presented the memorial to the trustees and it was accepted in a very pleasing manner by Alpheus H. Hardy.

Eugene D. Hawkins responded for "Phillips Exeter," and George Putnam spoke of "What Phillips Signifies," and William Edwards Park of the "Past and Present."

At a meeting of the association held just before dinner new officers were elected as follows: Gilman H. Tucker, president, Leander T. Chamberlain, Egbert Guernsey, Anthony W. Dimock, Anson P. Atterbury, and R. Wayne Parker, vice-presidents, Henry M. Love secretary, Frank D. Warren treasurer.

A personal letter to the editor from New York in regard to the Phillips Alumni gathering contains so much of special interest to our readers that we give it here in addition to the above account:

"The gathering was a notable one and of especial interest in that it was a meeting arranged for giving special honor to Dr. Bancroft. By the very courtesies of the evening he becomes all the more securely enrolled among the heroic principals of the old school. His portrait just painted from life by Loomis, I believe, of this city was presented to the trustees by the New York Alumni Association. In the gift Mr. E. B. Conners had a large share."

Besides the presentation, which was gracefully done, many kind tributes were given to Dr. Bancroft, touching the present prosperity of Phillips and honoring his tactful, masterful principalship. The eulogiums of praise were thoughtful and hearty, and must have strengthened the good doctor's heart, though his modesty and love for the school itself so overflows his desire for appreciation that the tributes moved him deeply. His own address was in his richest, happiest vein, and a stirring comment upon the Academy's position, its aims and its needs.

The portrait is a good one. It does not and could not flatter him, but it catches something of his forceful, inspiring personality that gives the charm to his life.

The addresses by Leander T. Chamberlain of New York City and by Dr. Wm. Edwards Park of Gloversville, N. Y.; son of Prof. Park of Andover, were eloquent beyond the usual order and almost a surprise to the alumni present.

Mr. Hardy in accepting for the trustees the portrait of Dr. Bancroft was very happy and pleasing. The double quartette from the Glee Club rendered most acceptably a number of school and college songs, and quite a number of Academy boys living in this vicinity added cheer to the gathering. Mr. Whiting spoke for the school, mentioning in pleasant detail the organizations, the features of the school life which are its particular characteristics."

Obituary.

REV. HENRY HERRICK.

It is doubtful whether one could find a man living to-day who was a member of Phillips Academy seventy-eight years ago, or of Andover Theological Seminary seventy years ago; yet this was true of Rev. Henry Herrick of Woodstock, Conn., who passed from earth March 11, at the age of ninety-two. It was a long period to look back upon, yet his memory covered it to the last year of his life, and his references to Andover experiences, in the family of Preceptor Adams, and in the Seminary with his beloved room-mates, W. A. Schaffler and Waterbury, and to his revered instructors, were always full of lively interest.

Mr. Herrick had been for two years the oldest alumnus of Yale University, and was, with one exception, the only surviving member of the class of 1822. After Mr. Herrick had completed his theological studies, he spent seven years in teaching at the South, and then returning, devoted himself wholly to the work of the ministry, preaching in Northern and Central New York and in Pennsylvania, much of his time having been spent in home missionary fields where his work, though arduous and often discouraging, was always done with untiring self-sacrifice and zeal.

His love of what ever was beautiful in nature or noble in literature, and his interest in all the great movements of society and developments of modern thought were keen and intelligent, but his desire to lift up and to save sinning souls was far stronger, and devotion to his God was the ruling passion of his life. When old age debarred him from the active duties of his chosen profession he still sought in all ways left him to serve his fellow-men; his family affections seemed to grow even more tender, and as earth faded away, prayer and his Bible became more and more absorbing and satisfying till the end came peacefully and painlessly, and the good man was gone.

He married in 1835 Miss Maria Wright, who survives him. Of their seven children now living, one, Rev. E. F. Herrick, is pastor of the church in Tampa, Fla., one of his daughters married Rev. J. T. Nichols (P. A.) of Seattle, Wash., and another, Mr. George Gould of Andover.

JAMES YOUNG.

James Young, an employee at the T&ar Rubber factory, died very suddenly in the early part of last Saturday afternoon. He attended to his work as usual in the morning and went out with the other employees at 11.30, but in less than two hours he was dead. The cause was stated by the physician to be heart disease. Deceased was 31 years old and a native of Ireland, and had not been in this country long. The funeral occurred on Monday, Rev. Fr. Field officiating, and interment was in the Catholic Cemetery.

JOHN WEBSTER.

Andover has lost one of its oldest residents in the death of Mr. John Webster who died at the age of 79 years and 11 months, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. James Morrill, Tewksbury Centre, March 14. Mr. Webster's home, after the death of his wife a few years ago, continued to be in the West Parish at the old homestead with his son-in-law, Mr. James Flint, who bought it after Mrs. Webster's death. Mr. Webster went to Tewksbury Centre for a short visit and was soon after attacked by the grippe, from which he appeared to be recovering when he suddenly succumbed to heart failure after a few hours' illness.

The funeral took place from his former home on March 17, the services being conducted by Rev. Edward W. Pride. Many friends and neighbors showed respect and sympathy by their presence. The burial was in the cemetery of the West Parish. Mr. Webster is survived by a son, Mr. Nathan Webster of West Andover, and three daughters, Mrs. Morrill of Tewksbury Centre, Mrs. Elbridge Batchelor of North Tewksbury, and Mrs. James Flint of the West Parish.

MRS. LOUISA HOWARD EATON.

Mrs. Eaton was born in Grafton, Vt., March 26, 1818. Of a family of seven, all of whom lived to mature life, she was the last to pass away. Her sister, Mrs. Emerson, widow of Rev. Joseph Emerson, who had made her home with Mrs. Eaton for many years, died in 1892.

Marrying Mr. James S. Eaton in 1841, her home was at first in Colchester, Ct., where he was a teacher in Bacon Academy. They came to Andover in 1847, Mr. Eaton being the well known principal of the English department of Phillips Academy until his lamented death in 1885. Mrs. Eaton continued to reside in the Bartlett Street home until 1892, since which time she has lived with her daughter, Mrs. Dr. A. J. Abbe, in Fall River. She died there on the twenty-ninth of March, aged 77 years and 3 days.

Mrs. Eaton was a woman of simple, strong, beautiful character. She proved her earnest Christian faith by a life full of good works. During all the forty-five years of her residence on Andover Hill she kept in constant contact and close sympathy with the young life of Phillips Academy, the Theological Seminary, and Abbot Academy, making the acquaintance in later years of the children of those she knew in early years. Men and women all over the land will remember with gratitude her helpful kindness in the time of their student life here. Her children were: Prof. James H. Eaton of Beloit College who died in 1877, Prof. William W. Eaton of Middlebury College, George T. Eaton, teacher in Phillips Academy, and Mrs. Abbe of Fall River.

The funeral services were at the house of her son on Bartlett Street on Monday afternoon and were conducted by Prof. Churchill, whose selections of Scripture and touching words of prayer voiced the loving esteem and sincere sympathy of the many old friends and neighbors who were present. The interment was in the Chapel Cemetery.

Town Makes Three Years Contract with Electric Company.

The Selectmen have signed a three years' contract for lighting the streets of the town, with the Andover Electric Co., dating from March 1, 1895. The substance of the contract is that the Company agrees to furnish 31 arc lights of 1200 candle power each, and 72 incandescent of 25 candle power, to be lighted from dark until midnight every dark night, or parts of dark nights, that is, whenever the town is not lighted by the moon, for the sum of $3700 per annum.

The Selectmen, or lighting committee, have the right to cancel the contract at any time if the Company does not operate the lights in accordance with the tenor of the same. But the Selectmen or lighting committee shall give written notice to the superintendent of the Electric Company, of their intention to cancel the same, expressing the particular fault or faults, and the Company shall have thirty days from receipt of the notice to remedy said faults. It is agreed that the breaking of lines of the Company by the elements, accidents to its machinery, or fire at its station, shall not be construed as a fault by which the contract shall be cancelled, provided the Company shall repair and put its plant into working condition without unreasonable delay.

If arc or incandescent lamps shall be extinguished during the time herein specified for lighting, by any fault or negligence of the Company, it is agreed that a rebate on the price to be paid for lighting said lamps shall be made at the rate of 25 cents per night on an arc, and 6 1-4 cents per incandescent.

"My Country, 'Tis of Thee."

Andover has a special interest in the national anthem and in the impressive services held at Music Hall on Wednesday as a tribute to the distinguished author, Rev. Dr. Samuel F. Smith of Newton. As is well known, "America" was written by Mr. Smith, when a student at the Theological Seminary here in 1832. The place of its composition was his room at Mrs. Hitchings' house on Main Street, now the residence of Mrs. Blunt. The afternoon exercises were mainly for the children, two hundred scholars from the Boston Public Schools furnishing music.

In the evening Governor Greenhalge presided, Prof. Harris of Andover offered a most fitting prayer of invocation, Dr. Smith told the story of the composition and remarkable circulation of the hymn, Ex-Governor Long made a fine address, while the "Hallelujah Chorus" rendered by one hundred and twenty-five voices from the Handel and Haydn Society was magnificent. They also joined in the chorus to the "Star Spangled Banner," sung by Mrs. Walker and tumultuously applauded, as were also the selections by the Harvard Glee Club. "America" was of course sung again and again. There was much regret that Professor Churchill was unable to be present and contribute the reading which had been placed against his name in the program.

Matrimonial.

LIVINGSTONE-LOVEJOY.

The home of Supt. of Streets Joseph T. Lovejoy in West Parish was the scene of a pretty home wedding on Wednesday evening, when his daughter Amy Belle was united in marriage to Porter Edwin Livingstone also of West Parish. Rev. Edward W. Pride of this town was the officiating clergyman. The ceremony was witnessed by quite a gathering of relatives and friends, a number being from out of town. After the ceremony a wedding repast was served.

Both are well-known young people in that vicinity and have a large circle of friends, as was testified by the very pretty and large display of wedding gifts. They received the hearty congratulations and best wishes of all.

FARMER-BARTLETT.

Herbert Edward Farmer, grandson of Mrs. Moody Abbott of Frye Village, was married last Wednesday to Miss Gertrude E. Bartlett of Gorham, Me. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Frank R. Shipman of the South Church. Mr. Farmer is quite well known here and attended Phillips Academy several years ago.

Base-Ball.

HARVARD 17, ANDOVER 5.

The Phillips Academy team opened the base-ball season last Saturday afternoon by playing Harvard Varsity at Cambridge.

Harvard won in a seven inning game 17 to 5. The weather was suitable to most anything rather than a base-ball game. The players were nerved with the cold and the pitchers did not dare to let out at all, consequently Harvard batted Sedgwick pretty freely. Out of 11 errors made by Andover the outfielders had six, being unable on account of the high wind and grounds, to judge flies. Drew caught a good game, while the playing of Barnes was of the star order. Barnes and Drew each made a three-base hit, while Barker made a timely single in the fourth inning that brought in two runs. It is hardly fair to make any judgment of the team by Saturday's exhibition, but as a whole it was not discouraging nor particularly encouraging.

BROWN 11, ANDOVER 1.

Tuesday was another cold and disagreeable day for ball playing and the Academy team was beaten at Providence by the Brown University team 11 to 1 in five innings. Sedgwick was again in the box for Andover and while Brown made but six hits he was wild giving eight bases on balls. Andover was very weak at the bat, getting but two hits, both by Sedgwick, one a two bagger. Andover went to pieces in the third inning and gave Brown six runs on two hits. Donovan, Brown's second baseman and formerly shot stop for Andover, led his team in batting making 3 hits with a total of 5. Andover has had very little out door practice, but with good weather in which to get limbered out, it would appear that the Academy team this year will be strong in the battery and fielding departments, but rather weak in batting. To-morrow afternoon the Lowells are scheduled to play here.

The rapidity with which croup develops calls for instant treatment; and yet few households are prepared for its visit. An admirable remedy for this disease is Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It has saved hundreds of lives and should be in every home where there are young children.

Rev. Joshua Coit, D.D., secretary of the Home Missionary Society, occupied the pulpit at both morning and evening services at the Congregational Church last Sunday. Mr. Coit told of the work that the society was carrying on in our own state and the west, dwelling upon the importance of the work and of the pressing need of liberal financial aid on the part of the churches. A collection which amounted to about $40 was taken up for the benefit of the speaker's society.

The house and contents belonging to James Coates on River Street were totally destroyed by fire early Wednesday morning. The alarm was rung in about 1 o'clock, but the flames had gained such headway before the firemen arrived that it was impossible to do anything to save the property. The house and furniture were fully insured. Circumstances connected with the fire led to the belief that it was the work of an incendiary, and John Coates, a youngson of the family, was arrested on suspicion. At the hearing, however, which took place Wednesday evening, Justice Poor decided that there was not sufficient evidence to hold the accused, and he was accordingly set at liberty.

EASTER LILIES.

In purple and crimson glory
The Easter sunlight poured
A flood through the chancel windows
In the temple of our Lord
Its waves passed over the altar
To bathe the cross with their glow
And stain the tiles with crimson,
Like sunset over the snow

Till every fragrant chalice Seemed filled to the brim with wine.
Distilling there into vapor
And rising in clouds divine.
Farther and farther the incense
Its delicate perfume spread,
Like loving thoughts sent earthward
By souls of our happy dead.

With prayers from our hearts uprising,
Which mingled and seemed to reach
Through the space 'twixt earth and heaven.
So blending them each with each,
That my soul could feel the presence
Of one who gathers the lilies
In gardens of paradise.
—R. F. Blodgett.

AN EASTER FLOWER.

BY BENJAMIN NORTHRUP.

(Copyright, 1895, by American Press Association.)

Just out of the city there is a long winding road which takes you over the low hills to the sands on the beach.

A brackish stream of tide water crosses the road, which is spanned by a stone bridge. No one now living was born when this bridge was built. It is cracked with age, stained and moss covered, and in the crevices grass, flowers and tiny shrubs grow. On some of the stones a wandering missionary has painted signs praising God and calling upon the wicked to repent before it is too late.
Over the widest crevice this is painted:
"Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

Under this in a little grotto some blue violets had grown, snugly sheltered from the sun and storm.

It was late in May or early in June when she came over the cracked stone bridge on her way to the beach. She had never been in the country before.
She had been in the park once, but that was when she was a very small child, and she had forgotten almost how it looked.

Under the shades of the old bridge the children of the Fresh Air fund stopped for luncheon, and she and the other little girls took off their shoes and stockings and paddled in the creek. After the sandwiches and apples, doughnuts and cakes, she found the violets and dug them out. She had never seen anything so beautiful before. They were prettier than all the Easter flowers in the east side shop windows, and they smelled sweeter. Besides that, she herself had found them, and they were her own.

All afternoon, while the other children played in the sands, she played with her violets, picking the soft black earth from their roots to see how small and pink they were, and opening and closing the half-blown buds to see the fresh blue hid under the green shells.
If some older girl who knew all about the country and wild flowers, this being her second summer in the fund, if this experienced girl had not told her that violets cannot stand such prying treatment, they never would have lived to reach the town.

It is not far from down Rye way at the stone bridge to down Battery way at the sea wall. Two hours. That is all if you take a fast train, and violets will live a long time when you bury their roots in moistened earth and let the blossoms alone. Therefore, when she reached her home in Battle Court, the flowers were as almost fresh and sweet as they were in their grotto in the bridge.

A cracked stone pitcher became their new home, and on pleasant days they stood outside on the kitchen window sill and looked down on the stone flagged

SHE FOUND THE VIOLETS.

sourtyard. Long before midsummer came they had seen more of life than they and all the other violets along the Rye road could ever have dreamed of, giving violet imaginations equal even to their fragrance.

They saw Blind Flaherty, the beggar man, beat his lame boy over by the sink until the police came in, and after them an ambulance. One awful afternoon they saw the wife of Micky Donovan, the prizefighter, jump from the fifth story window of her room and fall on the pavement in a sprawling heap—white, black and red—and she did not even moan when she was picked up.

They also saw Paddy McKeever, him that drives the baker's cart, meet Sally just outside the gate in the shadow of the night before they ran away and were married. They liked this, and they also liked the hand organ man who sometimes played in the street outside the court while the children danced to its strains. These things reminded them of the country road, and they were better for seeing and hearing them. It is a great mistake to think that wild flowers forget their country homes when they are planted in town pots. If you do not believe this, just take your spring flowers back to the brook meadows and see how quickly they will revive at one whiff of the fresh, soft air.

In stormy weather she took them inside the room, and when the weather grew cold they stood on a shelf facing the window beside the stove, where it was always warm.

That is the way the violets lived from early in May or late in June until the winter had gone and Easter had almost come.

Up town there is a great church. It is rich and beautiful. The sunlight that streams through the stained windows is purple, blue and golden, and sometimes the figure of a saint wondrously colored is cast across the chancel floor.

The little girl who picked the violets used to go to this great church, and she was welcomed here because it is a great church.

Good Friday, with its seven services, had passed, and the Lenten trappings of gloom were being taken away to make place for the Easter flowers. There were lilies, roses, orchids, violets, palms and flowering shrubs. There were great wreaths of greens hung from the pulpit, and the baptismal font was all white and pink. Rare and common, hot-house and wild flowers were massed together.

They were all love offerings, and this is the reason that a simple bunch of blue wild violets found a place in one corner of the altar almost hidden by a splendid display of roses. Only one person saw them, except the young women of the Altar guild, who, laboring for love, arrange the flowers for Easter and other feast days.

She sat in one of the front pews, and she was dressed in plain black, very plain and common black, such as other washerwomen wear when their children die. She saw the violets, and her one wish was that the little girl who had brought them to town from the old stone bridge and had cared for them all year for this very Easter altar were only alive to see them too.

It was a great congregation befitting a great church and a still greater feast-day. From the doors to the chancel rail

HE PRESSED THEM TO HIS LIPS.

every pew was filled, and there were chairs in the aisles. These were filled, too, and back of them all men and women stood. The front pews in this church are given up on Easter day to the poor of the parish. The children from the orphanage and the caped and bonneted women from the Aged One's home filled several rows on the right, and on the left were the men and women and children who on ordinary Sundays sit far back under the gallery over the vestibule. They teach that God's Son rose from the dead on Easter day for rich and poor alike in this great church.

The chimers in the belfry had finished their song, the big A bell had given the last of its three taps, and the suborganist in the choirroom had taken his note from it.

"Onward, Christian Soldiers," was the hymn, and the great congregation outside heard it sung behind closed doors. Then came the "Amen," louder than the melody, richer and fuller.

The choirroom doors opened, and the choristers, robed in white and black, marched out. The great organ in the chancel caught up the air and led the singers. First came the trebles, sweet and high. Then the altos, they came next, and made a second in the harmony.
After them came the tenors, and last of all the basses. Then the harmony was complete.

Onward, Christian soldiers, marching as to war,
With the cross of Jesus going on before.

That is the refrain. That is what the whole choir sang as they faced each other from the opposite sides of the chancel, and its mighty strains rang through the church like the strain of a band marching at the head of an army into battle.

After the service came the sermon.
The preacher was an old man, with white, silken hair. You have seen a skein of silk on a cold day. The threads stand out, one apart from the other. That is the way his fine white hair stood out from his head. It was like a nimbus frosted. His voice was low and soft and sweet. He had sung as a treble in that choir 50 years before. Then he was a tenor, and now for more than 30 years he had been the rector.

"I am going to say something to you today that I have said to you every Easter day for 30 long years."

That is the way the sermon began.
"Christ, my children, rose from the dead on Easter day, but before he rose he died. Some day we may rise at join him in everlasting glory in paradise, but before we shall rise from the dead we must die. We all must die, but when? Shall we be prepared when our summons comes? Are we prepared to die now? Yes, now. Why not? We know not when our time shall come.

Every Easter day for one long generation I have repeated this warning as I do today. And among those who heard me there were many who were not alive to hear me on the following year. Some of you must die before next Easter day.
When death comes to you, will you be unprepared? Shall the blood of him who died that we might live always be shed in vain in even one single instance? This —is—for—you—alone—to—say."

Even the choir listened to this. The boys stopped fidgeting, and the men sat very still. The woman in black looked at the bunch of violets on the altar, and tears fell upon her gloves.

That was what he said, although he used more words than I have done and took a longer time to say it, and after he left the pulpit and joined the assistant ministers back of the chancel rail there were more wet eyes than the washerwoman's in that great church, and there were many promises made for the coming year that the makers will not live to keep.

Early Easter Monday the ladies of the Altar guild were again at work. The flowers which had been lent for the festival were returned to their owners. The chancel stairs were thronged with serving men and maids waiting to carry them home. The other flowers—the cut stalks from the florists, the bouquets from the hot-houses and the little bunch of wild violets—were taken away in a wagon to a hospital. The sick have their Easter on Monday.

It was in a long white floored ward.
Near the end of it stood an iron cot by a window. This was Jim's cot. Jim was a newsboy before a street car had cut off one of his legs. Before that he had been in the Fresh Air fund, and he loved the country with a love that the real country boy never dreams of until he has grown to be a city man.

They carried down this long ward these fine flowers from the Easter altar —roses, orchids, lilies and still more roses. Their fragrance made the air heavy, and the lame boy turned his face toward the window.

After all had been distributed a nurse brought to him a spray of wild violets. They were all that was left.
He took them in his hands and pressed them to his lips. Then he said something about the country so low that the nurse couldn't catch it and fell asleep.

A Famous Egg Dance.

There is a pretty account of the marriage of Marguerite of Austria with Philibert, the handsome duke of Savoy.
It is called "Marriage aux oeufs." She had come to the castle of Brae, in the charming district of Bresse, lying on the western slopes of the Alps. Here the rich princess kept open house, and Philibert, who was hunting in the neighborhood, came to pay his court to her.

It was Easter Monday, and high and low danced together on the green.

A hundred eggs were scattered in a level space, covered with sand, and a lad and lass, holding each other by the hand, came forward to execute a dance of the country. According to the ancient custom, if they succeeded in finishing the branle without breaking a single egg they became affianced.

Then Philibert, radiant with youth and happiness, appeared upon the scene.
He bent his knees before the noble chat-elaine and besought her hospitality.
He proposed to her to try the egg fortune. She accepted. Their grace and beauty charmed the onlookers, and they succeeded, without a single crash, in threading the perilous maze.

"Savoy and Austria!" shouted the crowd. And she said, "Let us adopt the custom of Bresse."

They were married and enjoyed a few years of exquisite happiness. Then the beloved husband died. Marguerite survived him long, but never forgot him.

Bad Egg's Revenge.

How to Etch Eggs.

There are many ways of coloring and ornamenting Easter eggs. A simple way is to sew them up in highly colored prints before boiling. There is one way to engrave eggshells. Take an egg that has been blown and stop up the ends with wax. Then write or draw any design desired with varnish or tallow.
Then drop the egg into a weak acid like vinegar. In a little while the acid will decompose the lime in the shell, except where the lines are marked by the varnish or tallow, and the latter will stand out in bold relief.

Easter Card.

BEFORE I could get relief from a most horrible blood disease,
I had spent hundreds of dollars TRYING various remedies and physicians, none of which did me any good. My finger nails came off, and my hair came out, leaving me perfectly bald. I then went to

HOT SPRINGS

treatment, but very soon became disgusted, and decided to TRY

SSS. The effect was truly wonderful. I commenced to re-

the first bottle, and by the time I had taken twelve bottles I was entirely cured—cured by S. S. S. when the world-renowned Hot Springs had failed.

WAS A BOMBSHELL.

A Bad Bond Turns Up In the Newton, N. H., Forgeries.

Work of Investigation Still Going On. The Holder of the Bogus Bond at Present Has Nothing to Say.

NEWTON, N. H., April 2.—Another chapter in the Newton forgeries was enacted here yesterday. The redemption of the bonds of the town occurred from 2 to 5 o'clock at the town hall. Out of $10,000 worth of bonds but $5000 worth were presented for payment.

The sensation of the day was the presentation of a forged $500 bond by Nathaniel K. Johnson, a retired shoe manufacturer of Haverhill, Mass. Town Treasurer Atwell refused payment as soon as he saw the signatures. Ex-Town Treasurer Wilder declared his signature on the bond to be bogus, and two of the selectmen's signatures were also pronounced not genuine. Mr. Johnson was obliged to leave the hall without the money.

The alleged $500 bond held by the Powow River National bank of Andover, Mass., and the $500 bond held by the Granite State bank of Exeter, N. H., were not presented. It is reported that they have been promised the cash for them by the alleged forger before Thursday. This cannot be verified, however, as the bank officials are very reticent.

Bogus Bond Creates a Sensation.
The bogus $500 bond presented was a No. 8, the same as that at present held at Exeter, and the fact that there are three No. 8's in existence has caused a tremendous sensation in Newton. The work of investigating the forgeries is still being conducted by the town officials, and they think that they know where to place the blame.

The amount of the forged bonds now presented, according to Town Treasurer Atwell, is $2900. Among the genuine ones presented were six $500, six $200 and 17 $100 bonds. The signatures on the forged paper are pronounced a good imitation. The bogus signatures are written in a heavier hand than the original.

Town Treasurer Atwell will again redeem the additional bonds at the town hall tomorrow, when other and more startling developments are looked for.

HAVENHILL, Mass., April 2.—Nathaniel K. Johnson of this city, who presented a $500 town of Newton (N. H.) bond and was refused payment, was seen last night by a reporter. He refused to answer a question as to how he came into possession of the bond. Mr. Johnson thought he would have something to say later on on the bond question.

Lippitt For Governor.

PROVIDENCE, April 4.—Charles Warren Lippitt (Rep.) was elected governor by 10,000 plurality. The remainder of the Republican state ticket—Edward R. Allen for lieutenant governor; Charles T. Bennett, secretary of state; Edward C. Dubois, attorney general; Samuel Clark, general treasurer—are elected by pluralities of about 10,000. The Republicans carried Providence, and their assemblies will have pluralities ranging from 250 to 3200. The Republicans elected their entire assembly back in the four cities of the state—Worcester, Pawtucket, Central Falls and Newport—by pluralities ranging from 250 to 600. The next assembly will include 92 Republican senators, 60 Republican representatives, 3 Democratic senators and 8 Democrats to representatives.

Fired at Thirteen Times.

NORTH ADAMS, April 4.—Holly Andrews and his wife were arrested yesterday for the larceny of goods valued at $1000. Mrs. Andrews was easily secured, but it took a hot chase to capture the man. The officers finally took him, after having followed him for eight hours, during which time the fugitive was fired at 13 times without being injured. The couple were arraigned and pleaded not guilty, and were held to await a hearing.

Took No Action on Football.

CAMBRIDGE, April 3.—The Harvard faculty did not touch on the football question at their regular meeting yesterday, much to the disappointment of those interested, who hoped to see the question settled one way or the other. The more sanguine among the footballists consider this as indicative that the faculty may take no further action on the matter, thereby silently assenting to the athletic committee's position.

Republicans Control Hartford.

HARTFORD, April 2.—The city elections here yesterday were very quiet, only 6224 votes being cast out of a total vote of 13,500. The Republicans elected three aldermen and the Democratic five. The hold-over aldermen are six Republicans and two Democrats, which gives the Republicans control of the board by two majorities. The new common council will stand 17 Republicans to 15 Democrats.

Was a Friend to the Slave.

DANIELSONVILLE, Conn., April 4.—Henry Hammond, the abolitionist, died here yesterday, aged 81 years. He was born in Pomfret in 1814. He was instrumental in forming the first anti-slavery society in the state, and in 1847 was associated with Hon. Salmon P. Smith of New York and others in forming the memorable Buffalo platform.

Engineer Lost a Leg.

CONCORD, N. H., April 1.—The parallel rods of the locomotive on the paper train on the Concord division of the Boston and Maine railroad broke near North Boston yesterday. Both crashed through the cab, smashing it, and one struck Edgemoor Wood on the left leg, cutting it off below the knee.

Killed by a Train.

DANBURY, Conn., April 3.—William H. Connolly, aged 19, of Boston, employed by the Boston Bridge company, was killed by a train on the Consolidated road near Beaver Brook. He was engaged with other workmen in repairing a bridge when the train struck him.

PROVIDENCE, April 4.—Martin Hanson, Jr., 21 years of age, fell down an elevator shaft, a distance of 77 feet, yesterday, and died from a fractured skull.

WRECK ON MAINE CENTRAL.

Bangor Train Runs Into the St. John Express With Fatal Result.

BANGOR, April 3.—Maine Central train No. 93, which left Bangor at 6:15 o'clock yesterday morning, carrying local passengers to Oldtown, and Bangor and Arnscoot railroad through passengers for Houlton and Caribou, crashed into the night express from St. John, N. B., which was 50 minutes late. The collision occurred on a down grade, three miles above this city.

At it happened, both trains were running slowly at the time of the collision. The three engines and the three firemen jumped, and all escaped with bruises, except James Ward of Bangor, fireman of the express, who was caught beneath the debris of a postal car which shot out past his engine, and was instantly killed. Baggage Master Eben Shaw jumped and was severely hurt.

Caleb F. Palmer and Fred S. Woodbury of Bangor, postal clerks, were buried in the wreckage, and the bumpers between which they were caught were scarcely more than a foot apart. They were badly bruised, and were rescued with difficulty, but no bones were broken.

Henry A. Appleton of Bangor jumped from the train when the crash came, and suffered a compound fracture of the leg above the ankle, the bone protruding several inches through the flesh. No other passengers were much hurt. The three engines were telescoped and crushed, a postal car and a baggage car were smashed into splinters, and several other cars were damaged. The accident was caused by a misunderstanding of instructions.

Boston's Fitting Testimonial.

BOSTON, April 4.—A grateful public yesterday engaged in presenting a fitting testimonial to Rev. Samuel E. Smith, the venerable author of the national hymn, "America." It took the form of public exercises in Music hall, which began in the afternoon and continued during the evening. The reception in the afternoon was presided over by Governor Greenhalge, and among the speakers were ex-Governor Long, Commander Thayer of the Grand Army, Dr. Lorimer and others. Dr. Smith made an address, telling how he happened to write the national hymn. A feature of the exercises was the singing of "America" by a chorus of 200 children from the Boston public schools. Delegations of school children were present from various parts of the state. Another large audience was present last night.

Mrs. Jewett Ends Her Life.

WESTON, Mass., April 2.—Mrs. Ellen G. Jewett, aged 45 years, wife of Henry L. Jewett of the International Trust company, was drowned yesterday in the Charles river. Mrs. Jewett was at the time in a state of mental excitement bordering on insanity. She left her home in Abundant, eluding the vigilance of the members of her family, who have maintained a close watch upon her for the last few weeks. Her body was discovered just below the Concord street bridge, between Newton Lower Falls and Weston.

Strong Indications of Suicide.

MEDFORD, April 2.—The autopsy over the body of W. Morton Small, the Tufts college student who was found dead in bed yesterday, has been completed, but no definite conclusion was reached as to the precise cause of death, although evidence strongly indicated suicide. A bottle containing cyanide of potassium was found beside the bed. The contents of Small's stomach will now be analyzed to discover whether or not death was due to poisoning. No cause for the deed can be ascertained.

Pilgrim Fathers Elect Officers.

BOSTON, April 4.—The supreme colony of the Pilgrim Fathers commenced an all-day session in this city yesterday. The reports show that 20 new colonies have been formed during the past year. The annual election resulted as follows: Supreme governor, Albion Briggs; supreme lieutenant governor, J. Scollay Taft of Keene; supreme secretary, James E. Shepard; supreme treasurer, Albert V. Bugbee of Lawrence, who was elected for his sixth term.

Serious Charges Against a Pastor.

PROVIDENCE, April 4.—At the session of the southern New England Methodist conference yesterday, Presiding Elder Benton of the Rhode Island district preferred charges against Rev. J. A. Rood, pastor of the Olneyville Tabernacle. The charges stated that Mr. Rood had trouble with his wife last fall, refused to support her and was endeavoring to secure a divorce. A committee was appointed to arrange for an ecclesiastical trial of the case.

Boiled Into the River.

HARTFORD, April 2.—Charles Cragen of Bristol, 34 years old, a paper maker by trade, was found drowned in the Connecticut river on the East Hartford side yesterday morning. His body lay in 18 inches of water face downward, as though while sitting on the bank asleep he had fallen forward into the water. An empty flask lay on the bank.

Heavy Damage Suit.

PITTSFIELD, April 4.—One of the heaviest suits ever instituted in this country has been entered by Warner & Wright of this city, attorneys for Mrs. Sarah McDowell of North Adams, against the estate of the late Benjamin F. Butler, the amount involved being over $100,000.

Labor Troubles.

There appears to have been no change in the condition of affairs at the North Andover mill. Mr. Sutton is dealing with his first labor disturbance, and as business is at present, does not seem particularly worried as to the result. It is understood that several of the weavers have already applied to the overseer for their respective positions when the mill shall start. The proprietor states that the help have been paid and when work is resumed the help will be employed anew at the rate established recently. At present the work is being largely done through the other mill.

As labor in this town is, so far as is known, unorganized, it is probable that the strike will not be prolonged, and particularly as there may have been a misunderstanding of terms between employee and employer and the grievance not so great as was at first considered.

A Disgraceful Affair.

Between 3 and 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon Chief of Police Robinson, with two officers, went to the Centre to investigate suspicious in regard to the sale of intoxicants at the Fred Hartman abode in the old lane off Andover Street.

Information from the Chief of Police is the basis substantially for the following: In shadowing the premises, one of the officers observed six well known persons, residents of the parish, whose names for the present we withhold, enter the house, or gather about the premises. Desiring to learn the cause of the attraction, Mr. Robinson, leaving the place under surveillance of the two officers, started for a search warrant. On his return with another officer, fire had consumed the place and there was nothing left to search for except to ascertain the cause of the fire. From current statements of officers and others, something rather stronger than suspicion rests upon one or more members of the sextette whose actions were watched by the hidden officers.

It is said that some one first set the bed on fire inside the house, and the owner succeeded in quenching the flames and afterward one of the men was seen in the rear of the building, and soon from that quarter flames arose which consumed it, and during this scene it is said the owner's hat was snatched from his head by the vandals and thrown into the fire. One of the officers gave the alarm, and members of the Cochichewick Engine Company, in various degrees of efficiency, soon arrived and were out under pay over two hours before the fact was known to the engineers of the department. The building and contents, however, had long since vanished.

No arrests were of have been made; the matter was called to the attention of the engineers, and they, in turn, notified the state authorities. With the apparent encouragement that crime and criminals receive from certain sources in this town, it is hardly to be expected that officers who desire popularity and consider the question of policy, will do their duty; yet, one should hardly criticise the officers but rather the rascally sentiment which is prevalent in the community.
